GONE FISHING

The West Coast Fishing Club's resorts are located at the very northern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands of Vancouver, British Columbia, where the salmon fishing is awesome. Every year, a lot of regulars return for the sport. But there's more: The Club House (on Langara's highest point, overlooking the ocean and ancient rainforest) has luxurious accommodations in the midst of this last frontier, with five-star dining each evening. North Island Lodge (at the south tip of Langara Island) has 12 comfortable rooms. And The Outpost (situated among rainforests and mountain streams in the heart of Graham Island's proposed ecological preserve) offers just 18 guests the opportunity to fish salmon and halibut in splendid isolation. Along with the fishing, chances are you'll discover humpback, grey and orca whales, sea lions, porpoise and otter, seldom-seen species of birds, rare Peregrine falcons, abundant bald eagles, and plentiful deer and bear. The West Coast Fishing Club offers guests a variety of other activities, including saltwater fishing, saltwater fly fishing, fresh water fly fishing, Hummer rainforest safaris, Haida walks, helicopter beachcombing and sea kayaking. Both guided and self-guided trips are available. For more information, log onto www.westcoastfishingclub.com.
